

Ready to Move: Navigating Your 'Final Move'

December 2025

Did you know that most separating or retiring service members move at government expense from their last duty station to the place they choose to live after their military service? This benefit is called the "final move," and it is also available to you as a Survivor.

WHEN should I arrange my final move?

Within One Year:

If you are living in government housing, you (and your child(ren)) may stay there for up to one year after your service member's death. Any time during the year, you may ask to be moved to your next place of residence at government expense. But, be sure to consider scheduling the time needed to enact your move. It is suggested that you start the process six months prior to the one-year mark.

Within Three Years:

If you are living in private housing (rented or owned), you may relocate at government expense one time within three years. Be sure to take into account scheduling time when planning your move. Consider beginning the process six months before the expiration date – two and a half years after the death and file for an extension if more time is needed.

HOW do I arrange my final move?

- 1 Review the current moving guidance in the U.S. Transportation Command pamphlet, It's Your Move https://www.ustranscom.mil/dtr/part-iv/dtr_part_iv_att_A-k_1.pdf
- 2 Request an account at the Electronic Transportation Acquisition portal (ETA) at <https://dps.move.mil/cust/standard/user/home.xhtml>. Be sure to have your line of accounting (LOA) information before starting.
- 3 Access the applications within ETA you need. These may include the Defense Personal Property System (DPS), Global Freight Management (GPM), Integrated Booking System (IBS), Cargo and Billing System (CAB) and others.
- 4 If you are planning a personally procured move (PPM), follow instructions at <https://www.dfas.mil/militarymembers/travelpay/armypcs/dityppmmoves.html>.
